Latest News - ERA Awards short list EduPrint

EduPrint are delighted to announce that they have been short listed in the Education Resources Award (ERA) for the Innovation Award category. The Awards are held to coincide with the Education Show 2007 and recognise the quality and diversity of educational products and resources.

Nat Hart, Managing Director of EduPrint responds to the news of the Innovation Award short list, "We were already proud of EduPrint and confident of its capabilities and educational value throughout schools and colleges. Yet it is its vocational value, offering pupils demonstrable skills essential to them succeeding in the workplace and business community that sets it apart from anything else in education to date and we are thrilled that this is recognised by ERA.

Our passion and belief is wholeheartedly in EduPrint as a product that will enable children of all ages and abilities to fulfill their creative ambition, fire their imagination and inspire their entrepreneurial spirit. EduPrint although an innovative product itself, also encourages innovation by the students."

EduPrint has developed learning packages to introduce "enterprise into education". It creates a learning environment that generates interest in all things digital and delivers life skills that all pupils will need in the future. Also by enabling students to run the EduPrint Centre as a flexible business within the school, encourages them to develop entrepreneurial & creative skills whilst providing positive funding options for the school itself.

You can see more of EduPrint at The Education Show – stand IT-K64 with OKI Printing Solutions and on stand IT-L60 with Hewlett Packard or call on 02392 599955.
